

Congratulations!

The Washington Post

and

The Embassy of Spain

are pleased to announce the winners of the Spanish Culture and Language Fellowships

The Washington Post congratulates the twelve Washington metropolitan area teachers who were awarded the 2004 Spanish Culture and Language Fellowships, sponsored by The Post in cooperation with The Spanish Ministry of Education, Culture and Sport and The Education Office of the Embassy of Spain.

The fellowship recipients will attend educational programs in July at some of Spain's finest universities in Alicante, Granada, Madrid, Salamanca and Santiago de Compostela.*

The university courses are designed to teach a variety of subjects, but focus on presenting new aspects of Spanish culture and language. The courses will help these already exceptional educators to broaden their knowledge and to increase their teaching effectiveness.

PHOTO-RUBEN RODRIGUEZ

The 2004 recipients are (back row, left to right): Jennifer Bury, Robert E. Lee High School, Springfield, Va.; Rachael Holovach, Brightwood Elementary School, Washington, D.C.; Jari Walsh, H-B Woodlawn Program, Arlington, Va.; Eric Hodge, Oyster Bilingual School, Washington, D.C.; Susie Crawford, Woodrow Wilson Senior High School, Washington, D.C.; Kimberly Shern, Walkersville High School, Walkersville, Md.; Elsa Greno, Lowell School, Washington, D.C. (front row, left to right) Ofelia Oronoz, Browne Academy, Alexandria, Va.; Pauline Heard-Dunn, Friendly High School, Fort Washington, Md.; Phillipa Brown, Kenmoor Middle School, Landover, Md.; Me Hae Kim, Mount Hebron High School, Ellicott City, Md. (not pictured) Teresa Lizardi, Farmwell Station Middle School, Ashburn, Va.

*Scholarships provided by: La Universidad de Alicante, La Universidad Complutense, Madrid; La Universidad de Granada, Fundación José Ortega y Gasset, Madrid; La Universidad de Salamanca and La Universidad de Santiago de Compostela.

The Washington Post is committed to helping Washington area schools provide exceptional learning environments and conducting programs that encourage and recognize excellence in education. For more information about The Post's education programs, please call the Public Relations Department at (202) 334-7969 or visit washpost.com/education.

The Washington Post